He Says He Wants to Do All the Good He Course.

Privisure, Nov. 24 - In an address here Andrew Carnegie made a few re-marks on the accumulation of wealth. He said some sought fortune for the gratification of having it. Others want it for the good they could do other peo-ple. His creed was: "I think a man who dies rich dies disgraced."

Regarding the distribution of his own money, Mr Carnegie said: "I expect to | in December, on a date not yet fixed. leave nothing when I die but my interest in the iron business. I want to do all the good I can."

TEN YEARS FROM NOW.

How the Plays Will Be Written Up at That Time.

The first production of Bronson Pinnyrow's new drama. 'The Hand of Steel,' took place at Askell's theater last night, with a large audience in attendance. Inlated by the announcement of an unrivaled cast, and it is not too much to say that the events of the evening confirmed the announcement beyond all expectation.

The role of the heroine fell into the bands of Miss Grace Mayleye, whose reputation rests upon her row with her husband on Broadway one day last May. Miss Mayleye, or Mrs. Lampers, as her intimute friends know her, made a pronounced hit with her andlence, looking thoroughly like the woman who could wield the horsewhip to some purpose. It is said her ex-husband's tojured right eye is now gotting worse, and last evening she wore a new Worth gown in celebration of the happy eyent.

A splendid foil to her impersonation was afforded in the work of Count Fraschetri, who emected the hero, and whose popularity has been enormous ever since he threw one of the maidservants down Twenty-five years was finally adopted as the time.
